CLAIMS 1-38 ARE PENDING

1. It is noted that this is a C.I.P. of McDonald, US 6,745,197, 19 March 2001, and that all claims of the instant invention involve elements, specifically uses of hashing, that are not supported by the Specification of the '197 patent. Thus the effective priority date for the allowed claims is 25 July 2003, not 19 March 2001.

2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

Many of the elements of the claims were well known in the art at the time of the invention. Exemplary are Nielsen, US 6,453,327, 17 September 2002 and Bisbee et al (Bisbee), US 2002/0184217, 5 December 2002.

Nielsen manages email that parses into a header and a body and he classifies email into groups such as "junk email" [FIG 6]. An incoming message may be grouped according to trusted groups [FIG 11a,11b]. Nielsen notes that a header can be considered to contain a (sub-) header and (sub-) body [COL 1 lines 40-48], but this is not the header and the body of the message in the context of Nielsen, it is simply a two-part string.

Authentication of the sender's identity involves hashing part of the message header [COL 15 lines 37-55], but not including the signature block field of the header.

Thus, Nielsen fails to teach or suggest hashing "over at least part of the header and over the message body of each message" as well as the use of such hash codes to group messages or to identify one such message as a unique message within each group.

Bisbee teaches [0023] that hashing of messages may be computed over a header and message body. However, this is not in the context of grouping messages in a message store, as for Nielsen above, using such hash codes for grouping and characterization of a group.

Thus the prior art of record fails to anticipate or suggest the claimed invention.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
